Audience Profile

Licensed professionals in the fields of architecture and engineering are highly educated and affluent individuals managing their own architecture or engineering firms, providing consulting services, or working for large corporate offices. This broad market range provides a variety of opportunities in many sectors to a group that is responsive to upscale consumer offers and also has diverse business support needs.

Many architecture and engineering offices have additional needs for advanced software packages for drafting and rendering, plus state-of-the-art computer systems and networks. They also seek sources for architectural photography, construction materials, interior design services, and building-related suppliers.

Professionally, architects and engineers need continuing education and training for their career to keep their office practices and professional licenses up-to-date and valid. Many choose to pursue certification exams that require training and study guides and courses.

Take advantage of this high-income market by purchasing our professional architecture and engineering mailing and email lists for targeted direct marketing.
